4.2.1 Library is automated with digital facilities using Integrated Library Management System (ILMS), adequate subscriptions to e-resources and journals are made. The library is optimally used by the faculty and students

Response:

The college having Library Management System has the ability to fully automate the library. The software for the library was just acquired by the organization. Every aspect of running a library, such as creating an admittance register, keeping inventory, exchanging books and journals, keeping track of students' use of resources, etc., is carried out using ILMS.

The Online Public Access Catalogue, or OPAC, allows students to locate books and journals by title, author, publisher, and accession number. Students can also produce user and membership data and enter Boolean operators and "free text."

There are good enough volumes, periodicals, and newspapers in the campus library. Each year, the current inventory is supplemented with new text and reference volumes.

Our college's science faculty is entirely self-funded, and every facility is occasionally provided by the university dependent on need. The library supports teachers and students with a range of additional tasks, including:

1. Access to previous exam papers
2. Free downloads of e-books
3. Freely downloadable e-research journals
4. Newspapers
5. Photocopying and printing services

A respectable selection of books enhances the well-kept campus library.
